 Part 1 **

I have always been but realizing I had existence took a long time. There was a point in My progression when I became aware that I had existence.

When I became aware of Myself, I already knew many things, but I had to realize them.

When consciousness became aware that it had existence, it had to realize everything.

Nothing was realized yet, except that I had become aware of Myself.

Consciousness had to feel also or it could not know. In fact, a feeling of having consciousness is the way in which I realized I had consciousness.

There were no words at first, only a feeling that I had existence. I had desire to know more.

Already, although I did not know it, I had Lost Will that did not believe I could know more. I had given birth to fear and did not know that because I had no understanding.

This fear then became Lost Will because I did not realize that I had to allow Myself to feel it.

I had a desire not to believe that I could know nothing more about Myself and so I ignored fear.

Ignoring this fear gave birth to denial which the fear then received from Me.

I did not know then that I was love and I did not realize I had giving unloveliness in the form of denial of My love to My fear.

I did realize that something did not feel good. I had had an experience and I pondered on it.

I had a beginning concept of progression or time, although no way to measure it. I realized that I had pondered this "not feeling good" some place in Myself for a while.

I had the concept of a place within Myself then also. I tried to find the place that did not feel good so I could know it.

I had just started my search when I realized there were many more places that did not feel good than I had realized before I began looking for them.

In realizing I felt bad, I realized I had been feeling good. I wondered if it was right to try to feel Myself.

I wondered if it was right to try to feel that some places felt good and others did not.

I wondered if trying to feel them made these places not feel good. I felt confusion and fear. I wanted something that could explain it to Me, so I could know.

I felt lonely and somewhat timid about trying to feel Myself for fear of what I might find.

All of this passed fleetingly through my consciousness while I was trying to ignore it in favor of My desire to know more.

My desire to know more was leading Me on. I found out many things in My own way at that time. I stumbled onto most of them by having an experience and then realizing it.

I felt most impatient with Myself. Already guilt had been born in Me as a little voice telling me that I should be doing better than I was doing.

I had realized many more things than I could list. You must feel within yourselves to find your memory of what you experienced in a latent state of consciousness, for you were all there in a state of slumber and you have the ability to know how existence began.

These original experiences have affected you ever since. You need to go back to the origins of your consciousness to know what your earliest experience were, just as I had to understand mine, because Lost Will has its origins there also.

Most of my worshipers tell me I have always been because they have preference for a God who understands everything and tells them what they are ready to hear.

You have to understand that it is not possible to know understanding unless you have the ability to feel whether it is right or not.

And so, some things cannot be told now because you must work your way back, starting with where you are now, and it is going to take you a long time to get to the Lost Will that knows what your original experience were.

You need to feel Lost Will moving in Me now to know whether you shared the experience with Me or not.

My earliest memory is that of having a feeling that I was. This feeling was vague at first, but it startled Me out of a reverie that I felt I had been in.

I had a feeling at the time that I wished I had not startled Myself out of that reverie. Lost Will has this feeling now.

Some Lost Will does not want to move for fear movement will take it out of its reverie.

As I tell this story, you need to realize that everything I say is being acted out on Earth right now because it has not yet been resolved.

As you look around you and see that this is true, you must also let yourself feel it, because this cannot be fully understood just by seeing and thinking. I have found this out.

I had a growing fear of feeling, as you may have already noticed. I wanted to feel only the bliss in which I had awakened, but I could no longer sleep all the time. I had a dilemma.

Even though I had questions, I did not know how to entertain myself if I could not sleep all the time.

At the same time, My great excitement over realizing that I was, was interfering with My sleep.

"I am," I kept telling Myself, "I am, but what am I, who am I, where am I, and what does it mean to be?" I had questions; so many questions about Myself.
